ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The first edition of Baltimore's Past: A Directory of Historical Sources, was published by the Baltimore History Network in 1989, and quickly went out-of-print. In 1993, the BHN was renamed the Baltimore Archives Network (BAN) and the decision was made to publish a new edition of the Directory.

The editors decided that this new edition should be greatly enlarged and the repositories should be grouped into twenty-five subject classifications. As with the first volume it is hoped that this edition will encourage greater use of Baltimore's cultural, historical, and research institutions by providing a concise, comprehensive guide to the many varied and rich repositories in the greater Baltimore area.

Like its predecessor, the Directory is the product of a two-year effort to gather information about member and non-member organizations that hold research collections related to Baltimore.. The editors would like to thank the following for taking the time to return a questionnaire and providing information on their repository: Louise Ackerson, Betty Jean Alevizatos, Carolyn Anderson, Dr. Herbert Andrews, Dr. Ralph w. Bastedo Tom Beck, Richard Behles, Rev. John W. Bowen, Lauren R. Brown, Margaret Burri, Ann Calhoun, Penny Catzen, Betsy Chaufant, Stanley Ciesielski, E.C. Dausch, Brigitte V. Fessenden, Lawrence G. Gilbert, Mary Adele Griesacker, Herbert S. Harris, Elmer Haile, Lynne Dakin Hastings, Dr. Hugh Hicks, Thomas L. Hollowak, John M. Hyson, Sr. Helen Jacobson, Bernice Jones, Dean Krimmel, Leslie Leach, Karen Lewand, Mary Markey, Nancy McCall, John McGrain, Jennifer E. Morgan, Kira Muller, Virginia R. North, Francis P. O'Neill, Nancy Perlman, Timothy D. Pyatt, Ned Quist, Chuck Rainville, F. Garner Ranney, Cynthia Requardt, Carol Runion, Elizabeth Schaaf, Rev. Edwin Schell, Judge James F. Schneider, Margaret Flowers Sobel, Gerry Stacy, Barbara Stevens, Diane Stillman, Benjamin Swanson, Rev. Paul Thomas, Nicholas Varga, Wesley Wilson, and Paul W. Wirtz. We also wish to extend our gratitude to a number of anonymous contributors who provided information on their repository.

The Baltimore City Archives is the official repository of the historical records of the Baltimore City municipal government. The Archives also contains non-governmental records related to the history of the city. The holdings of the Baltimore City Archives document the administrative operation of most aspects of the City's Municipal Departments, Commissions, and Agencies from 1729 to the present. These include records relating to public health, taxation, education, elections, water supply, law enforcement, legal and legislative actions. Of special significance are the Mayoral papers, petitions and correspondence to the City Council, Neighborhood Progress Administration, and the Planning Department.

While holdings of the Baltimore City Archives relate largely to the municipal government, they are an invaluable asset to researchers interested in Baltimore related topics. The Archives' holdings, with some exceptions, are open to general public. Published and in-house guides are available. A card file known as the WPA-HRS Index contains over 65,000 entries to individuals whose names appear on documents within the various record groups. Photoduplication services are available except for fragile items which are restricted.

Hours of Service: Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.
Appointment required.

The Baltimore Metropolitan Council, an agency of the State of Maryland, was created in 1963 by the General Assembly. Until recently it was known as the Regional Planning Council. The Council provides a forum in which the six member governments located within the Baltimore Metropolitan area (Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Carroll, Harford, and Howard Counties; and Baltimore City) can work together with Federal and State Agencies to identify and resolve mutual problems. Every five years the Council is required by law to devise a General Development Plan which is intended to promote orderly growth.

The Council's Library is a planning collection containing materials on public administration and finance; urban and regional planning; land use and controls; housing and urban renewal; social and economic planning; demography; education; libraries; recreation; cultural resources; fire protection; utilities; environment; land and housing economics; and transportation. A large portion of the collection of approximately 10,000 items is Maryland related, with concentration on the Baltimore region. All publications produced by the Baltimore Metropolitan Council staff can be found in the library collection.

Though the collection was established primarily for staff use, it is open to the public and borrowing privileges may be extended to researchers at the discretion of the staff. Inter-library loan requests may be made through Enoch Pratt Free Library Milo Central.

Photoduplication services are available to researchers. Photocopies can be supplied to Maryland libraries if requests are referred by Milo Central (Enoch Pratt).

Manuscripts: Bound minutes of the RPC (1959-).

Vertical File Materials: (2 drawers) clippings and ephemera.

Bequeathed to the University in 1942, the Garrett Library contains over 29,000 volumes in diverse collections of architectural history, incunabula, early Bibles, early printed classical texts, slavery and confederacy pamphlets, natural history, the history of costume, sixteenth and seventeenth century atlases, and early Baltimore and Maryland imprints.

GEORGE PEABODY LIBRARY
17 EAST MOUNT VERNON PLACE
BALTIMORE, MARYLAND 21202
(410) 659-8179

George Peabody's founding letter called for an "extensive Library...to be furnished in every department of knowledge, with...the best works on every subject...to satisfy the researches of students who may be engaged in the pursuit of knowledge not ordinarily attainable in the private libraries of the country." The Library was originally part of the Institute founded by George Peabody in 1857. Since the bulk of the collection was acquired between 1860 and 1916, it is particularly valuable to scholars interested in the nineteenth century. From 1966 to 1982, the Library was a part of the Enoch Pratt Free Library. During this time particular emphasis was placed on building on existing strengths in British local history, the natural sciences, and architecture. The library was also designated the Rare Book Department of the Pratt Library System. When the Pratt acquired the Peabody, books on music and the performing arts were retained by the Arthur Friedham Library of the Peabody Institute.

When the Pratt transferred the Peabody to the Johns Hopkins University the latter had to honor the will of George Peabody which stipulated that the Library be opened to the general public. Rare volumes are non-circulating, but volumes in good physical condition are available through inter-library loan.

Hours of Service: Monday through Friday, 9:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.

The Baltimore City Medical Society was founded in 1804, drawing its membership from the entire medical community. The organization held frequent scientific meetings and the Society became active in both civic and professional affairs. However, this activity began to recede around 1830.

On April 15, 1904, thirty-seven members of the various medical societies formed the present Baltimore Medical Society as a component of the Medical and Chirurgical Society. The organization and its members of practicing physicians carry on the tradition of their predecessor societies and espouse one goal - to improve the health of the community. This is achieved through a Physician Referral Service, Speaker's Bureau, and Professional Relations Committee which resolves complaints between physicians and patients.

The Society's earliest records are in the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland. The rest of the organization's records are open to research with some restrictions.

Manuscripts: Minutes (1882-1884, 1904-); Constitution and By-laws (1910-); correspondence (c. 1920-); membership lists (c.1920-); financial records (c.1955-); annual reports and monthly newsletters.

SAINT JOSEPH HOSPITAL ARCHIVES
7620 YORK ROAD
TOWSON, MARYLAND 21204
(410) 337-1616

Hours of Service: Monday through Friday, 8:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.

The Saint Joseph Hospital Archives aims to collect, preserve, and make accessible, to interested researchers the documents related to the history and operation of the hospital. First established in 1864, in Baltimore City on Caroline Street, it then relocated to Towson in 1965. The archives' desires to be supportive of the administrative, financial and legal responsibilities of the institution as well as the academic interests of researchers of healthcare.

The archives is particularly strong in the history of the Hospital and School of Nursing, as well as materials related to the sponsoring congregation (Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia) and Franciscan Health System. Among those which document these two facets are: minutes of meetings - Board of Trustees and its committees; Medical Board and its committees, hospital committees, and administrative/departmental groups; organizational charts; manuals of policy/procedure; strategic planning materials; annual reports; early ledgers/financial reports; hospital publications; legal documents - contracts, deeds, legacies, and litigations.

Photoduplication services are available by special arrangement. The collections are not available for loan.

Non-Print Media: Seven cassette tapes of Oral History.

The Historical and Special Collections of the Health Sciences Library is composed of six separate collections which include significant pre-1900 works in medicine, dentistry, pharmacy, nursing, and social work. The library continues to add new acquisitions as funds, gifts, and availability of desired materials permit.

The Health Sciences Library is an academic medical library with subject strengths in medicine and allied health. A brochure describing the historical and special collections, which are concentrated in medicine, dentistry and pharmacy, is available on request. Photoduplication services are available, but dependent on nature and condition of the materials, as well as the availability of staff time. The historical collection materials do not circulate.

Books/Monographs: (Approximately 7,000 volumes) Although the project is not yet complete, many historical holdings are included in the library's regular online catalog. Call numbers and location data displayed in the catalog define the special nature of these items as Historical Collection materials.

The volumes compose seven distinct collections:

Crawford Historical Collection - 586 volumes of works characteristic of an eighteenth century scholarly professional education. Reflecting his interest in natural history and an early proponent of the revolutionary theory of the parasitic causes of disease, the collection's holdings include works from as early as 1565 and continue through the nineteenth century.

Cordell Historical Collection - The largest collection and the broadest in scope, the Cordell Collection exceeds 3,800 volumes. The collection is particularly strong in works on surgery; internal medicine; obstetrics and gynecology; and yellow fever.

Grievess Dental Historical Collection - contains more than 1,000 volumes. Established in 1926, the collection is named in honor of Clarence J. Grievess, an alumnus and faculty member of the Dental Department and prominent member of the Maryland State Dental Association. Dr. Grievess gave the University his library through the Clarence J. Grievess Library Foundation. The Foundation and Dr. Grievess' contemporaries have contributed to the purchase of additional volumes as well.

In addition to the oldest American dental journals and the 1541 edition of the earliest known dental book the collection contains many items devoted to the history of anesthesia.

Pharmacy Historical Collection - More than 1,000 volumes originally a part of a joint dentistry/pharmacy library belonging to pharmacist August Kach. It is rich in herbals, works on materia medica, as well as the history of pharmacy and early pharmaceutical imprints. The collection also contains numerous pharmacopoeias gathered from around the world, representing the seventeenth to the nineteenth centuries.

Nursing Historical Collection - At 56 volumes, this is the smallest collection, but it boasts early editions of the works of Florence Nightingale. It also contains biographical items devoted to the life of her primary American counterpart, Clara Barton, as well as others important in the field of nursing.

Social Work Historical Collection - The most recent addition it contains 400 volumes started through the purchase of Marie Stopes birth control collection. The collection's scope includes child welfare, social settlements, and the history of social work. Other highlights are individual reprints published by the Milbank Memorial Fund, devoted to population and fertility studies conducted in countries throughout the world from the 1940s through the 1960s.

Special Collections - Housed in the Maryland Room are the records that document the history of the university, the UMAB campus and its affiliated schools. Included are yearbooks, college catalogs, commencement programs, alumni publications and campus newsletters, including those produced by the library itself and by the Regional Medical Library Office.

Of particular interest are hand-written doctoral theses from the School of Medicine, dating from the early years until 1887. These are complemented by the bound compilations of the published writings of prominent UMAB faculty members, dating primarily from the early to mid-twentieth century.

A clipping file of biographical, historical and general nature is located in vertical file cabinets.

Among the unusual items are matriculation registers, charters and minutes of faculty committees spanning the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. These include materials from several rival institutions that eventually figured in the history of the University of Maryland System, through merger or other administrative means. These encompass such institutions as the Washington Medical College, the University School of Medicine, the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Baltimore, the Baltimore Medical College, the Woman's Medical College of Baltimore, the Maryland Dental College and the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery. Holdings also include compilations of minutes from the Maryland State Dental Association and the Baltimore Association of Dental Surgeons.

PEALE MUSEUM RESEARCH CENTER
BALTIMORE CITY LIFE MUSEUMS
225 HOLLIDAY STREET
BALTIMORE, MARYLAND 21202
(410) 396-1164

Hours of Service: Wednesday through Friday, 10:00 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.
Appointment preferred.

The Peale Museum was established in 1814 by Rembrandt Peale. Originally known as the Gallery of Fine Arts, "an elegant rendezvous of taste, curiosity and leisure," it delighted Baltimoreans until it closed in 1831. The gallery was restored and re-opened in 1931 as the Municipal Museum of the City of Baltimore. While the Holliday Street building is still known to Baltimoreans as the Peale Museum, its name was officially changed to the Baltimore City Life Museums in 1985 to reflect the Museum's wider mission (the Peale administers several historical museums). The Museum collects "objects depicting the customs and manners of the citizens of Baltimore City throughout its history."

The Museum maintains a Reference Center with an impressive collection of historical prints and photographs of Baltimore. The non-circulating special collection is open to the public. Limited research by members of the staff can be undertaken in response to phone or mail inquiries (depending on the nature of the request and proximity of the researcher). Photoduplication services are available to researchers.

The Peale honors loan requests from major cultural and educational institutions whenever possible.

Architectural Plans and Drawings: Drawings, blueprints and renderings for several hundred residences, commercial and public buildings. Represented in the collections are the firms of Wyatt and Nolting (including Baltimore City Courthouse, 1890s-1930s); Mottu and White; Laurence Hall Fowler (War Memorial Building, 1921); Parker and Thomas and successors (Belvedere Hotel, 1902, as well as later alterations and the Jamestown Exposition, 1907).

Books/Monographs: (Approximately 1,400 volumes) Baltimore history, American material culture, and museum practices.

Manuscripts: A small group of miscellaneous 19th and 20th century correspondence.

Maps & Atlases: (Approximately 225) Printed and manuscript maps (1792 - date); late 19th century Bromley & Hopkins Atlases; and Sanborn fire insurance maps for 1879-1880 (2 volumes), 1901-1912 (4 volumes), and 1914-1950s (15 volumes).

Photographs: (Approximately 75,000 images) 19th and 20th century photographs documenting the life of the city, including Baltimore architecture, maritime activities and industry. The collection contains glass plate negatives (approximately 10,600 plates); film negatives and paper prints; works by A. Aubrey Bodine (approximately 12,000 images taken for the Baltimore Sun's Rotogravure and feature sections between 1927 and 1970) and John Dubas (3,850 images with special emphasis on ships and working class life, 1906-1973). Noteworthy subject collections include views of the 1904 fire (approximately 450 images); a 1926-1927 survey of city-owned property including schools, monuments, markets, parks, play-grounds, police and fire stations (approximately 3,800 images); surveys of several neighborhoods by the Commission on Historical and Architectural Preservation taken in the late 1960s (approximately 2,000 images); a reference collection of 35mm color slides of Baltimore row houses generated for a 1981 exhibit (approximately 600 slides), as well as photographs taken by the Baltimore Gas & Electric Company, ca. 1906-1955, documenting the public utility's role in the metropolitan community (approximately 18,000 negatives and 100 reels of 35 and 16mm motion picture film of the 1920s-1950).

Printed Ephemera: 19th and 20th century playbills, invitations, menus, postcards, and greeting cards.

CENTER STAGE
700 NORTH CALVERT STREET
BALTIMORE, MARYLAND 21202
(410) 685-3200, ext. 357

Hours of Service: Monday - Friday, 9:00 a.m. - 6:00 p.m.

In 1963, Center Stage opened with considerable opposition from the Baltimore City Fire Department, in a cramped and reconverted gymnasium on Preston Street. The Fire Department cited the theatre's exits as examples of violations of the Municipal Fire Code. In three years the theatre company moved to more spacious quarters in the former Oriole Cafeteria on East North Avenue. It wasn't long before they outgrew this space and the move to their present location took place.

A written request for use the records of the theatre group at Center Stage is required before access is granted.

Manuscripts: Correspondence, minutes, legal documents, membership lists, cast lists, and financial records.

Photographs: Yes.

Printed Ephemera: Flyers, newsletters, pamphlets, programs, scripts, and scrapbooks.

Founded in 1857, Baltimore's Peabody Institute was the first major cultural center in an American city. It provided the city with a scholars' library, a public lecture series, a Gallery of Art and Sculpture and an Academy of Music, now the Peabody Conservatory. Since its opening, the Institute has had a profound effect on the cultural development of the City of Baltimore, inspiring the Enoch Pratt Free Library, The Johns Hopkins University, the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra and the Walters Art Gallery.

The institutional records of the Peabody Institute, maintained by the Archives, chronicle not only Peabody's history, but the cultural development of Baltimore from the mid-nineteenth century to the present. These records reflect the original divisions of the Institute and include the records of the Peabody Lecture Series, the Peabody Gallery of Art, the Peabody Library and the Conservatory of Music with its adjunct Preparatory Department. The records also include an extensive Archive of recorded Peabody performances - including visiting artists, faculty and student recitals - and a large photographic collection.

The Archives also maintains the records of many of the performing arts institutions in the Baltimore area, among them the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, the Baltimore Civic Opera, the Harford Opera Company and the Orchestra Piccolo. The Archives' special collections includes the personal papers of the Institute's trustees, faculty and staff as well as noted musicians and artists.

The Archives is open to scholarly researchers and to the general public. Persons wishing to use archival materials are requested to contact the Archivist by phone or letter prior to their visit to discuss the nature of their research and to arrange for an appointment. Access to some materials in the collection may be restricted. Photoduplication services are available to researchers. Photographic reproductions can be provided for research and study.

Personal Papers: Papers of well-known musicians, composers and Marylanders associated with the Peabody Institute include: Franz Bornschein (1884-1990) - choral composer and Peabody faculty member, noted local conductor and musician; Enrico Caruso (1873-1921) - noted operatic tenor; Louis Cheslock (ca. 1910-1980) - violinist, composer, Peabody faculty member, associate of H.L. Mencken; Samuel Claggett Chew (ca. 1730-1915) - Baltimore physician, faculty member of the University of Maryland, Peabody Trustee; John Pendleton Kennedy (ca. 1812-1870) - lawyer, author, Secretary of the Navy (1852-?), founding President of the Board of Trustees; William Henry Rinehart (ca. 1860-1892) - Maryland-born sculptor; John Charles Thomas (ca. 1935-1950) - concert and operatic artist; Severn Teakle Wallis (1831-1891) political reformer, member of the Maryland Legislature.

Microforms: Several of the collections maintained by the Archives are available on microfilm at the Audio desk of the Arthur Friedheim Library.

Photographs: The photographic collection contains images of Peabody faculty, visiting artists, students, ensembles, opera productions, special events and both campus and local architecture.

The Maryland Diocesan Archives comprises official records, manuscripts, and related materials concerning the Church of England in colonial times and its successor, the Episcopal Church, in Maryland and the District of Columbia since the Revolution. The Diocese was divided in 1868, when the Eastern Shore became the Diocese of Washington. Since their respective dates, Easton and Washington maintain their own Archives, but this collection has a lot of subsequent material concerning the whole area.

The bulk of the collection covers the period of 1750 to 1900, with smaller but valuable holdings for earlier and later periods. Among papers of all the Bishops of Maryland are those of Thomas John Claggett (d. 1816), James Kemp (d. 1827), William Murray Stone (d. 1838), William Rollinson Whittingham (d. 1879), William Pinkney (d. 1883), and William Paret (d. 1911).

Described by a former national archivist of the Episcopal Church as, "One of the two most important collections of Bishops' papers..." in this denomination, the Archives are of great value for the entire history of the Episcopal Church in the nineteenth century throughout the country, as well as relations with the Church of England, the Greek and Russian Orthodox Churches, the Reformed Churches of Scandinavia, the Old Catholics in Europe, the Church of Jesus in Mexico, and many foreign missions, including Liberia. Rich also in national and local secular history, there is much on such subjects as the War of 1812, the Civil War, economic and social conditions, African-American history, Women's history, and many charitable and educational institutions.

Although a prime source for parish history and biographical information, particularly of clergymen, the collection is generally of only incidental use for genealogical purposes. It does include original registers and/or vestry minutes of fifty-five defunct Maryland Churches, but copies of some of these are also available in the Maryland State Archives and Maryland Historical Society. The Archivist cannot undertake genealogical research, but genealogists and other researchers are welcome to use the collection.

Special Collections: The Callister Papers, over 800 items, chiefly pertaining to Henry Callister, Eastern Shore merchant, 1741-1768, and his wife, Sarah Trippe Callister (records of her girls school in Baltimore, 1783-1788); The Goldsborough Papers, 1751-1879, over 250 items concerning the Goldsborough and related families of the Eastern Shore; The Chase Papers, 1738-1855, 180 manuscripts concerning the Rev. Thomas Chase (1738-1773), rector of St. Paul's Parish, Baltimore; Samuel Chase, Judge and Signer (1783-1806), Judge Jeremiah Townley Chase (1783-1824), and other members of the Chase, Caton, Decatur, Key, Ridout, and Ridgely families; and The Whittingham Family Papers, private correspondence of Bishop William Rollinson Whittingham and his relatives, approximately 600 items, 1808-1886, including much about Maryland affairs.

A name and subject catalogue of over 160,000 cards indexes part of the Archives, and uncatalogued materials are segregated by authors or subjects to facilitate research. About 700 books supplement the manuscript resources, and many thousands of pamphlets and related ephemera provide additional information. A few hundred photographs, chiefly of churches and clergymen, are partially catalogued.
